Glosa, an International Auxiliary Language

Glosa is an international auxiliary language.

There are many drafts of international auxiliary languages, but Glosa is the most advanced one with no grammatical endings on the words (linguists call that an “isolating” structure). It is designed by Ronald Clark and Wendy Ashby and goes back to Lancelot Hogben’s Interglossa (1943).

From The Glosa Basic Reference (by Ron Clark and Wendy Ashby, 1994):

Glosa is an artificial language intended for use among people with different native, cultural, or national languages. It is an auxiliary language and has no purpose of supplanting or replacing any other languages. Its purpose is only to be a common means of communication for people of different languages. Glosa has several distinguishing characteristics:

- Its structure is very simple and based on semantics. It is an analytical language with no inflexions, genders, or diacritical marks. Glosa does have ways of forming plurals, tenses, questions, etc., similar to Chinese and Malay, which use a word for each idea, but no inflections. A small number of words handle grammatical relationships not otherwise provided for. Many Glosa words can serve as more than one part of speech as meaning and common sense allow.

- Glosa words are based on Latin and Greek roots common to the chief Euro-languages; via science, technology, and medicine, these words are penetrating all languages. Although a larger vocabulary is available, a base vocabulary of between 1000 and 2000 words handles most situations.

- Its pronunciation is simple and regular, and its spelling is phonetic.

- Above all, Glosa is neutral. Because it is no one’s own language, it is available to everyone without jealousy or resentment over the dominance of any one or a few national languages. Its use of Latin and Greek roots, many of which are already in widespread use, gives it internationality.

Pronunciation

Every letter must be pronounced including the final vowel.

5 vowels as in Spanish, and as pronounced in English: fAther, cafE, machIne, mOre, lUnar.

Try to pronounce O like English AW.

Diphthongs: Pronounce vowels separately.

Consonants as in English with following exceptions:

C always pronounced like CH in English CHurCH.

J as Y in Yes.

R must always be pronounced, preferably trilled.

G must always be hard as in Get.

H should always be pronounced as in English Help.

Q pronounced as English QU or KW.

SC always pronounced like English SH (- but is very rare. A regular pronunciation like S-CH should be possible, too).

Accent gently on vowel before last consonant.
About this dictionary

Sources for the words have been several publications by Ronald Clark and Wendy Ashby, © Glosa Education Organization (GEO, P. O. Box 18, Richmond Surrey TW9 1WD, UK), namely “Glosa Basic Reference”, “English - Glosa 1000”, “English - Glosa 1000 classified”, “Glosa 6000”, “18 Steps to Fluency in Euro-Glosa” (Glosa-English list), “Central Glosa” (lists “5000 English to Glosa 1000” and “Useful Prefixes”), “Français - Glosa 1000”, “Español - Glosa 1000” and others and the friendly correspondence with Glosa author Wendy Ashby.

The Glosa Internet Dictionary has three levels.

- “Mega”/“Literary”-dictionary (large) = all words.
- “Basi”/“Basic”-dictionary (middle): its words are marked with “+” (or “++”).
- “Centra”/“Core”-dictionary (small, = only most useful “Basi”-words): words are marked with “+++”.

Suggestion: prefer ++, then +.

Further abbreviations:
“G” marks Glosa words with Greek origin.
“1” marks Glosa 1000 words (words, that appear in one of the several Glosa-1000-lists).
“*” marks a word not original GEO (Clark/Ashby).
“1*” means only a slight modification from a Glosa-1000-word.
“X”-words should be avoided. The preferred synonym is in brackets (=...).
and: adj adjective, n noun, v verb.
